FORMER WEATHER MAN HERE, DIES

Friends Receive News of His Demise at Mount Rainier, Maryland, of Cancer

Maj. William B. Stockman, for many years head of the U. S. weather bureau here, and one of the best known men in this branch of the federal service, died at Mount Rainier, news received by some of his friends in yesterday's mail. He was at the residence of his mother.

Maj. Stockman entered the service of the weather bureau-then the signal service on December 1, 1877, and continued in that line of government employment until the time of his

For a number of years Mr. Stockman was one of the official forecasters of the weather bureau on duty at Washington. He was removed from this work to take charge of the important extension of the bureau's activities in the West Indies and Carri-bean sea at the time of hostilities with Spain, with headquarters at Ha-vana, Cuba; in connection with this in those waters, through the advance

To explain why more miles of mains have been laid by this concern this year than in any other of its 10years' existence in Honolulu, Frank Cannon, acting manager of the Hono-Iulu Gas Company, tells of a unique plan adopted to give gas buyers gas where they want it and also to encourage the sale of real estate.
